FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

OAKSTONE MEDICAL PUBLISHING INTRODUCES OSLER FAMILY MEDICINE BOARD REVIEW AUDIO SELF- STUDY PROGRAM

Birmingham, AL, September 28, 2005 – Oakstone Medical Publishing, a leader in health care publishing and a wholly owned Hights Cross Communications company, today announced the availability of the Osler Family Medicine Board Review audio self-study program for physicians. This audio self-study program, designed to help physicians prepare for family medicine board exams, provides a comprehensive review of 65 topics presented by expert board review instructors. The Osler Family Medicine Board Review Audio Self-Study Program is available immediately and is priced at $499.00

Nancy McMeekin, Oakstone Medical Publishing President and CEO: “Oakstone Medical Publishing is pleased to provide family medicine physicians with this convenient audio self-study program. Certification and re-certification of physicians is becoming a major issue as the medical community grapples with issues relating to quality of care and the need to stay current with new diagnostic and treatment protocols. Oakstone Medical Publishing is committed to providing outstanding audio self-study educational programs that give physicians the convenience and flexibility of listening to program material while driving, exercising, or in other down times.”

In addition to dozens of audio lectures of 30-60 minutes each, the Osler Family Medicine Board Review Audio Self-Study Program includes a comprehensive print syllabus and visuals and a neurology section with over 100 Q&As likely to appear on the exam along with 34 clinical vignettes with answers.

Oakstone Medical Publishing also offers Osler audio self-study programs in Anesthesiology, Neurology, Ophthalmology, Otolaryngology, Pathology, Pediatrics, and Psychiatry. These audio self-study programs were developed in cooperation with the Osler Institute, a leading nonprofit medical education organization.
