FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

ENRON LITIGATION NEWS SERVICE FROM OAKSTONE PUBLISHING TRACKS UNFOLDING LITIGATION

Oakstone Publishing, under its Andrews Publications imprint, has introduced the online “Enron Litigation Reporter” to help the legal community follow the global litigation fallout from the Enron bankruptcy and Arthur Andersen accounting scandal

Birmingham, AL, March 28, 2002 – Oakstone Publishing, a Hights Cross Communications company, today said it has introduced a new online “Enron Litigation Reporter.” Published by Oakstone’s Legal & Business division under the prestigious Andrews Publications imprint, this latest online information subscription service follows the unfolding series of high-profile legal developments involving Enron Corporation and its former auditor, Arthur Andersen. The service has thus far published over 60 reports and also provides an easy link to original court filings.

Nancy Wilkins, Oakstone Publishing’s CEO, said: “Enron-related litigation will be a major issue in the worldwide legal community for many months. Our ‘Enron Litigation Reporter’ is a reader-friendly source of information, analysis, and original court filings that helps litigators stay current on a growing array of legal proceedings both here and abroad.”

Oakstone’s Legal Publishing division has been providing timely information and analysis to the legal community since 1970. It provides litigation reporting services covering nearly 50 current litigation areas – including asbestos, drug recall, gun, hazardous waste, sexual harassment, tobacco -- and now Enron.

According to Joanne Fiore, Esq., Oakstone Legal Publishing’s President: The Andrews imprint has built a justifiably renowned reputation for providing high-quality litigation reports, newsletters, books, and conferences for the legal and business communities. Our Document Access Service is the legal profession’s preferred source of easy access to an unrivaled database of litigation pleadings, including complaints, motions, and briefs.”
